In the present study, we examined the efficacy of DHODH inhibition with PTC299 in MDS cell lines, primary MDS cells from patients, and in xenograft MDS models. Our results indicate that PTC299 suppresses the growth of MDS cells in vitro and in vivo. In addition, we found that PTC299 synergizes with decitabine by enhancing its incorporation into DNA through the inhibition of pyrimidine ...

Footnote 10 The major factor behind the income approach is the readily available information about income and income distributions. Sarlo (1996) argues that while income is acknowledged as an imperfect indicator of well-being for individual cases, in the aggregate it is a reasonably good proxy for the consumption choices available to households. This being the case, while low-income measures ...
